AG⟩NGINE

Agriculture National Graduate Institutional Name Exchange

MANAGED BY THE COLLEGE OF AGRICULTURAL AND LIFE SCIENCES, UNIVERSITY OF FLORIDA

Student Submissions for AG-NGINE

AG-NGINE, the Agriculture National Graduate Institutional Name Exchange, invites junior and senior undergraduate and master's students with interest in further graduate study in agriculture, natural resources, and related sciences to register online and answer the questions below. All students who register will automatically be added to the AG-NGINE database. More than 80 colleges of agriculture and related sciences have been invited to participate and recruit you for any/all of the following: master's programs, PhD programs, fellowship opportunities, summer research opportunities, graduate recruiting events and other academic programs.

By registering your information, you give permission for AG-NGINE Member Institutions to contact you for the purposes of graduate school recruitment. Please note that once you agree to volunteer your information you assume all risk for any unintended release of information to third parties not associated with AG-NGINE should this unlikely event occur. AG-NGINE Members will obtain access to the national database on October 8, 2025.
